Fulton Center opens today and will eventually connect to 11 train lines. / MILES DIXON, METRO

Fulton Center opens after series of delays

Downtown. The new transportation hub aims to be the Grand Central of the Financial District.

After the sun comes up today, commuters using Lower Manhattan's Fulton Center subway station can expect a brighter, more spacious commute.

The main entrance, at Fulton Street between Broadway and John Street, opens to riders at 5 a.m. today. The center connects the 2, 3, 4, 5, A, C, J, Z and R lines, and it will eventually extend to the World Trade Center and PATH trains. With 27 entrances, wider corridors and new pedestrian traffic flows, officials say the 300,000 daily commuters will move more quickly through the station.

The main entrance features a glass pavilion with multiple levels and winding staircases. Installation "Sky Reflector-Net," by James Carpenter, allows natural light to pour in below street levels, using 81 glass diamond-shaped panels to let the light in.

The station has 52 digital screens throughout to display ads and emergency information. It boasts 10 escalators and 15 elevators.

On Sunday afternoon, the MTA hosted a tour attended by elected officials, MTA chairs, community leaders and architects.

"Welcome to New York's next great public space … something New York has never seen before," said Thomas F. Prendergast, chairman and CEO of the MTA. "The center is an important symbol for New York in so many ways."

In addition to highlighting the visually stunning atrium, dignitaries spoke on how Fulton Center is a symbol of Downtown's resilience and revival after 9/11.

Manhattan Borough President Gale Brewer called the station a "reminder to come out of the ashes but never forget."

"Who would have thought, in those dark days after 9/11, when we were breathing poisons, and the place was covered in white dust and debris, that Downtown would recover as it has … that 40,000 more people live here, that it's a 24-hour, seven-day-a-week community?" Congressman Jerrold Nadler asked.

Delays and details

Some 66,000 square feet of kiosks, shops and office space are available in Fulton Center, and will be leased out by Westfield. Tenants start in the new year.

- While giving reporters a tour of the new facility, Michael Horodniceanu, MTA Capital Construction president, said that the project finished with about $30 million left over and that the funds will return to the MTA.
- When asked about the extensive delays of the center, which was originally slated to open in 2007, Horodniceanu said that one delay can throw a whole project off.

Federal funds

MTA Capital Construction President Michael Horodniceanu said $1.27 billion of the $1.4 billion it cost to complete the station came from federal funds, including the largest stimulus package awarded to date. An additional $847 million came from a 9/11 appropriation from Congress, and $130 million from the MTA in local funds.

Two killed over the weekend in stabbings

NYC. A spate of stabbings took place across the city this weekend.

A series of stabbings occurred over the weekend, leaving two victims dead and two others seriously injured.

The first incident occurred Friday afternoon when a 22-year-old female was reportedly attacked on a Brighton Beach street by her estranged husband, who stabbed her multiple times. The victim remains in stable condition at Lutheran Hospital.

Her assailant, Ravshan Saibnazarova, 30, has been charged with assault.

The second incident took place in Harlem at 8 a.m. on Saturday, when a 57-year-old woman was slashed in the face as she rode the elevator in a residential building.

Following the altercation, she was treated for injuries at Lincoln Hospital. The male suspect fled the scene.

A third stabbing occurred on Saturday night, when Josefina Mendoza, 68, was discovered dead in her Queens apartment with multiple stab wounds. The NYPD arrested Naser Alzein, 51, a resident of the same building, on charges of murder in the second degree.

Another deadly stabbing took place at 6 a.m. on Sunday when police responded to a 911 call and found Eric Gonzalez, 38, stabbed to death.

Maria Ordonez, 20, was taken into custody and charged with murder in the second degree. METRO

Queens

Man's remains round near railroad tracks

The NYPD are seeking help identifying the remains of a man that were discovered on April 12 near the CSX railroad tracks in Elmhurst, Queens.

The gruesome discovery was made when police responded to a call from a 36-year-old man who was collecting cans in the vicinity before he found a torn bag that contained a skull. Upon further inspection, officers uncovered more bags in the area containing other body parts, which were later confirmed by the Medical Examiner's office to belong to a 30-year-old white male.

The victim / NYPD

An investigation into the homicide and the victim's identity are ongoing. The NYPD recently released a composite sketch of the deceased.

Anyone with information relating to the identity of the victim or the homicide, is asked to call the NYPD's Crime Stoppers Hotline at 800-577-TIPS. METRO

More digital screens are coming to the subway

New York City. The kiosks provide travel route information and service updates.

The MTA said more digital screens that assist riders with planning their trip will be ready to go by the end of the year.

There are 30 stations in the Bronx, Brooklyn, Manhattan and Queens that have the interactive screens, called an "On the Go Travel Station," and the MTA said 153 more of the screens will be ready to use by the end of 2014.

The screens are funded by a public-private partnership between New York City Transit, Outfront Media and Control Group NYC. The project began as a pilot program three years ago. According to the MTA, some 1.2 million riders have access to the digital transit information every day.

"The On the Go Travel Station network is one of the most ambitious in-system customer information initiatives we've undertaken since the introduction of our subway countdown clocks," MTA Chairman and CEO Thomas F. Prendergast said. "Having a digital platform for customers to obtain travel information, while simultaneously giving us the ability to communicate with them, is a huge step forward in our efforts to provide timely information to customers at the point of transit decision-making." METRO

Progress

The MTA initiated use of the On the Go Travel Station three years ago.

- The On the Go Travel Station provides subway customers with information about their trips, from planning and service status to information about nearby destinations.
- It also gives them up-to-date service advisories for their trips.

Gifts for kids

Who you're helping

In addition to Toys for Tots, Metro New York teams up with The Partnership for the Homeless, a local nonprofit that provides a number of resources to get homeless families into shelters and to help them with housing and job training. Their annual holiday party provides meals and toys for more than 450 kids. This is the third year in a row that Metro will work with them. There are more than 22,000 children who live in the city's shelter system.

"With a toy donation you can help The Partnership for the Homeless transport that child to her holiday dreams for at least a day," said Arnold Cohen, president and CEO of The Partnership of the Homeless, during the Tony's Metro Magic drive last year. METRO

Tony's Metro Magic brings holiday cheer

Toy drive. Today Metro kicks off its fifth annual drive, which invites you to help brighten a child's holiday.

It's the most wonderful time of the year again — when Metro launches Tony's Metro Magic, our toy drive for underprivileged children in New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

This year marks the fifth anniversary of the appeal, which was renamed last year in memory the man who oversaw the project for more than three years, Tony Metcalf, Metro's longest-running editor-in-chief, who passed away in July 2013 from colon cancer at the age of 50.

There was nothing Tony loved more than to see the smile on the countless children's faces each year as they opened gifts generously donated by Metro readers.

"Year after year, we are astonished at how well Metro readers respond to Tony's Metro Magic," said Metro CEO and Publisher Yggers Mortensen. "It is wonderful to see the gifts stack up at our Metro offices and to realize that we are all helping to make a needy child's holiday more joyful."

Once again this year, we'll be asking readers to contribute what they can to Tony's Metro Magic, which, since its inception, has donated thousands of toys to children for whom there would otherwise be no gifts over the holidays.

In conjunction with Toys For Tots, Metro has established a wish list at the Toys "R" Us website that readers can access by going to www.metro.us and clicking on the Tony's Metro Magic logo.

From there, just choose the toys you wish to donate, pay online using Toys "R" Us' secure payment system, and your gifts, along with your name attached, will be delivered to Metro's offices.

So starting today, and throughout November and December we will be reminding readers to donate both in print and online at www.metro.us.

This season, we hope you will remember the children who will spend the holidays in shelters or who may not have gifts to open. Even a small gift makes big difference. METRO

How to take part

1 Look for the Tony's Metro Magic logo set up at the top of our newly designed website, Metro.us.

2 One click on the Metro Magic logo will take you directly to a "Wish List" that we have set up on the website via a secure link on ToysRUs.com.

3 Once there, you can see all the toys we've already requested for kids, and more are being added daily. Simply select the toys you want and purchase them.

That's it! Selecting only the toys on our Wish List ensures all the gifts will be shipped to our offices.

Obama defends his plan on immigration in TV interview

Reforms. Obama said he has waited long enough for Congress to act on undocumented immigrants.

President Barack Obama defended his plan to use executive powers to implement some immigration reforms, saying in an interview on Sunday he had waited long enough for Congress to act.

Republican leaders warned that an ease to some restrictions on undocumented immigrants would "poison the well" or would be "a red flag in front of a bull."

The meeting came after the Democrats were punished in midterm elections last Tuesday. Republicans seized the Senate and kept a majority in the House of Representatives, in what Obama said was a message from voters who held him responsible for how Washington worked, or didn't.

In an interview on CBS' "Face the Nation," Obama said he had watched while the Senate produced a bipartisan immigration reform bill, only to have it not taken up by House Republican Speaker John Boehner.

Obama said he had told Boehner if he could not get it done by year's end, the White House was going to have to take steps to improve the system.

He said borders need to be secure, the legal immigration system needs to be more efficient and there needs to be a path to legal status for the 11 million undocumented immigrants. REUTERS

Obama's choice for attorney general avoids political tangles

Loretta Lynch, the 55-year-old native of Greensboro, North Carolina, made history when President Barack Obama made her the first black woman nominated to become the top U.S. law enforcement officer.

As the top federal prosecutor in Brooklyn, Lynch has been tough on terrorism and cyber crimes.

She received a polite response so far from Republicans, but Obama urged the Senate to act quickly on the nomination.

The Senate will remain in Democratic control until January. A spokesman for Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid said Democrats haven't decided whether they will try to confirm Lynch before Republicans take over.

Flip a coin on Jeb Bush in 2016

There's a "50-50" chance that former Florida Gov. Jeb Bush will seek the Republican presidential nomination in 2016, according to his older brother, former President George W. Bush.

"I'd give it a toss-up," the 43rd president said in an interview that aired on CBS's "Face the Nation" on Sunday. "I know this about Jeb. He is not afraid to succeed. In other words, I think he knows he could do the job. And nor is he afraid to fail." BLOOMBERG

Anniversary

Germany marks 25 years since fall of Berlin Wall

More than a million Germans and people from around the world on Sunday celebrated the 25th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall, the event that marked the end of the Cold War.

A spectacular 15-kilometer-long string of 7,000 illuminated helium balloons traced the course of the barrier that once snaked through the city, slicing across streets, between families and even through graveyards.

They were set free one after another into the night sky, symbolizing the breaching of the wall by crowds of protesters in 1989. The Berlin Staatskapelle orchestra played Beethoven's 9th Symphony, "Ode to Joy," in front of the Brandenburg Gate. REUTERS

Americans released by N. Korea reunited with their families

Free. U.N. Secretary General Ban Ki-moon said in a statement he was "relieved" the Americans were returning home.

Two Americans freed Saturday by North Korea after a secret mission by a top U.S. intelligence official to secure their release were reunited with loved ones after arriving at Joint Base Lewis-McChord in Washington state.

"It's been an amazing two years, I learned a lot," Kenneth Bae, a Korean-American tour guide and missionary detained two years ago, told media upon his arrival at the base, the Associated Press reported.

Bae and Matthew Miller, who had been sentenced to years of hard labor for committing "hostile" acts against the Kim Jong Un regime, traveled to the U.S. accompanied by American intelligence chief James Clapper, who negotiated the men's freedom in a one-day trip to North Korea, the first by a senior U.S. official in about two years.

The Obama administration's efforts to free the men should not be viewed as a "diplomatic signal," said a senior U.S. official traveling with President Barack Obama to Asia, who spoke on the condition of not being identified. REUTERS

Nurse who fought Maine Ebola quarantine moving out of state

A nurse who treated Ebola patients in West Africa and publicly fought quarantine orders in New Jersey and Maine after returning to the United States last month has decided to move away from her home state, a newspaper in Maine reported.

Kaci Hickox and her boyfriend, Ted Wilbur, plan to leave Maine after Nov. 10, or the expiration of the monitoring period for the virus' 21-day incubation, according to the Press Herald newspaper.

Wilbur did not say where the couple planned to move. "We're going to try to get our lives back on track," he told the newspaper on Friday.

Wilbur and Hickox could not immediately be reached for comment.

After criticizing New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie over the forced isolation, she was driven to her boyfriend's home in Fort Kent, in Maine's far north, where Gov. Paul LePage ordered her quarantined even though she had tested negative for the virus. REUTERS

PETA criticizes 'Eaten Alive' show for animal cruelty

Cruel treatment. PETA is concerned that an anaconda will be tormented.

Fully grown anacondas can grow to more than 29 feet in length and weigh over 550 pounds. / GETTY IMAGES

Animal rights group PETA has slammed the Discovery Channel's "Eaten Alive" show, which claims it will show a man being eaten alive by an anaconda, as a publicity stunt that will torment the snake.

Trailers of the show, which will air Dec. 7 on the cable network, show naturalist and wildlife filmmaker and author Paul Rosolie donning a custom-built snake-proof outfit.

"I am about to be the first person that is going to be eaten alive by an anaconda," Rosalie says in the trailer as his team is shown catching a snake. "I don't expect anyone to believe us until we show it."

Although PETA said the premise of the show sounds far-fetched, if the description is accurate the snake will be tormented. It added that whether it is a hoax or not, it has asked the network to pull the show.

"Anacondas go days without eating and expend the energy needed to do so selectively. Making this snake use up energy by swallowing this fool and then possibly regurgitating him would have left the poor animal exhausted and deprived of the energy that he or she needs," PETA said in a statement. Cloud of pot smoke puts Colo. school on partial lockdown

A high school in Colorado, one of the first two U.S. states to legalize recreational marijuana use, was put on partial lockdown on Friday after a student's weed pipe filled a classroom with pot smoke, the school said.

The smoke from the device, known as a "gravity bong" or "bucket," was released into a classroom at about 9:45 a.m. at Adams City High School in Commerce City, a northeastern suburb of Denver.

"As a precautionary measure, our students were placed on a modified lockdown to limit movement throughout the school," the school said in a statement, adding that teenagers who had been near the device were examined by medical personnel. REUTERS

Chef faces jail, fines for feeding the homeless

For decades, 90-year-old Arnold Abbott has hauled pans filled with roast chicken and cheese-covered potatoes onto a South Florida beach park to feed hundreds of homeless people.

For his good deeds, Abbott finds himself facing up to two months in jail and hundreds of dollars in fines after new laws that restrict public feeding of the homeless went into effect earlier this year. REUTERS

Q & A. 'Human Barbie' opens up about attack on Halloween night

Valeria Lukyanova, the self-proclaimed "Human Barbie," is nursing facial wounds after reportedly being attacked last week outside her home in Odessa, Ukraine. The 29-year-old model suffered swollen lips and minor head injuries following an assault on Halloween night that she alleged was the result of a two-year hate campaign by anonymous stalkers. Metro spoke to Lukyanova, who gained worldwide fame for her doll-like face.

Lukyanova / FACEBOOK

How did the attack happen?
I came back home from a shop with bags and entered the door code when two men rushed from the dark and attacked me. They were waiting, I heard footsteps but did not realize that something like this could happen. I wanted to run, but they tethered me with a rope. I tried to free myself, but they cut my lips. I screamed. They hit me on the head. Then the second man hit me in the jaw. Then they ran away. Later in the hospital doctors told me that they had to remove two of my teeth. I did not see who attacked me. I only know that they were two men who were as small as I am.

You have had threats in the past, so why didn't you have insurance?
I receive threats every day. But still nobody dared to do something to me. I'm sure that this attack was made by one of my detractors on the Internet. Because in I never have any conflicts. I didn't have insurance, because I had no idea this would happen.

Have you recovered?
My "outside" is already in order. But my "inside" is still recovering. The doctors had to stitch something on the inside of my mouth. I do use makeup, but no one can see it because I wear sunglasses. DMITRY BELYAEV, METRO WORLD NEWS

Question

How do you feel about the situation in Ukraine?

The authorities are manipulating people to make more money. I'm sure there is mafia involved. Ukraine, Russia and the United States are all at fault. But I believe the U.S. the most, because they acted aggressively from the beginning.

Everyone says that Ukrainians and Russians have become enemies. This is just "brainwashing" served up by the press. I have good relations with Russians, I have family living there. My friends in Ukraine also talk to people in Russia. Nobody fights.

Make the most of a college campus visit

Tips. An expert offers suggestions for choosing the right school.

Like many high school seniors, Eileen Hurley is both excited and nervous at the thought of graduation and heading off to college. To find the right schools for her, Hurley and her family are spending time visiting campuses.

Currently, Hurley's favorite is Syracuse University; the Queensbury, New York, native says she's drawn to the large-school atmosphere. "A big thing for me is the sporting events," says Hurley, who is also applying to High Point University in North Carolina and Skidmore College. "I would love to be at Syracuse basketball games that are completely sold out. ... And every day you would be able to meet new people."

Much like with any successful shopping trip, it helps to know what to look for when visiting schools — a daunting task for most high school seniors.

"You have to think, 'Where will I be the most happy?'" says Suzanne Luse, the founder of College Expert, a college consulting group.

Keep these questions in mind when visiting college campuses, Luse suggests:

Would you do best at a small college or a large university?

"The best way to see if you match up with a school is to go to the information session," Luse says. "That's when you will get an idea of the class sizes, what majors they have and do you fit in with the SAT score range and GPA."

It's also important to ask yourself what kind of learning environment works best for you. For example, are intimate classrooms more your thing, or do you prefer the impersonal quality of large lecture halls?

Do you see yourself fitting in?

Tours, each led by a current student who is extremely competent at walking backward, will give you a good idea of the campus scene.

"This happens in most cases during the tour," Luse says. "Is there a Greek system? Is this a rah-rah campus with sports? Is it more nerdy or preppy? Are these students you would want to spend the next four years with? That's what the student needs to identify."

Do you like big cities or small campuses?

"Drive around the area to get a feel for what it's like," Luse says. "For students coming from out of state, you have to think about how easy it will be to get there and where the airports are." Some students love rural settings full of quiet and haystacks, while others thrive in the noise and pace of a city.

Use caution

Avoid this mistake

Whatever you do, don't judge the entire student body by your tour guide. "You might have a tour guide who is having a bad day," Luse says.

Remember to talk to other students in addition to your tour guide. / CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR, GETTY

Tip

Don't forget to consider the price tag

"You have to think about whether your family can afford this college," Luse says. "This is something parents pay more attention to, but students need to keep this in mind as well."

Video games. This college says gamers deserve scholarships, too

High school students who are outstanding athletes or promising intellectuals are used to fielding scholarship offers from some of the nation's top universities. But a small college in Illinois is offering considerable scholarships to a previously overlooked sector — those who obsessively play video games.

Robert Morris University Illinois introduced the scholarship program for gamers this summer, telling reporters that it was recognizing the growing power and popularity of what the school calls "eSports."

The scholarship concentrates on one game in particular: League of Legends, a multiplayer online battle game. Melcher told ESPN they were focusing on that game in particular because participants had to develop skills like team strategy to succeed.

It turns out that obsessively playing League of Legends pays off, at least for players interested in attending Robert Morris University. The newly minted scholarships will cover a maximum of 50 percent of the school's tuition and 50 percent of room and board costs.

Things college freshmen would do differently in high school

Lessons. Learn from the mistakes of some recent high school grads.

College application season can seem like a blur for many students, as test prep, campus visits and filling out a seemingly endless stream of forms combine to create what can be a stressful start to senior year. The new startup AdmitSee collects and analyzes applications from students who were accepted to colleges and universities across the country. The site recently asked its members about what they would do differently if they had to apply to college all over again. Co-founder Stephanie Shyu shares their answers with us.

Find internships to enhance real-world experience

"A lot of students are just not aware of [the opportunities] that are out there," says Shyu. While internships are usually associated with college and graduate students, she says there are opportunities out there for high school students if they know where to look. AdmitSee is working to launch a resource guide for teens to help them connect to companies and positions that would be a good fit.

Start prepping for the SATs earlier

Well after graduation, many students still wish they had studied more for the SATs, says Shyu. Familiarizing yourself with the exam and the material it tests can go a long way. According to AdmitSee's data, many students say they wish they had begun prepping during their sophomore year or earlier.

Join after-school activities

School clubs and sports are great ways to both explore new interests and make new friends. "I think that some students felt that they didn't join as many activities as they could have or that they weren't joining the right activities for them," says Shyu.

Visit every college you apply to

Shyu and her co-founder, Lydia Fayal, found that many students they talked to applied to colleges without ever visiting the campus. While it may be cost-prohibitive to visit schools across the country before being accepted, it's a good idea to plan trips to all of the local schools you are interested in. It's also recommended to keep a journal about each of your visits to keep everything organized.

Avoid regret

Put more thought into application essays

The college admission essay is one of the only times during the entire process where the student has the opportunity to let his or her personality shine through. Taking the time to customize an essay for each school could make a big difference. Shyu also points out that many students use their essays to bolster the weak points in their applications. (For example: Did your grades suffer during your junior year because you had mono or were going through some family drama? There's no way for an admissions officer to know that unless you tell them.)

1 Macaulay Culkin not dead, as reported

BTW, the guy on the right calls himself Anchovy Warhol.
TWITTER, PIZZA UNDERGROUND

Some celebrities are just better at taking a joke than others. Macaulay Culkin, for instance, laughed off a Facebook death hoax this weekend by tweeting a "Weekend at Bernie's"-style photo of him from the Twitter account of his band, The Pizza Underground. Fake reports circulated over the weekend that Culkin had been found dead, but as the photos posted by the band prove, he's very much alive. "We're on tour, you silly people," the band tweeted with a pic of Mac holding up a soda.

3 Andy Dick busted by the cops, also the sun rose today

Andy Dick is in trouble with the law, which really shouldn't count as news, I know, but there you go. So what did the ever-volatile comic do this time? Dick allegedly stole a necklace from a man after an encounter on Hollywood Boulevard last week, according to TMZ. That encounter apparently consisted of Dick riding up to the guy on his bicycle and asking if he could see his chain, reportedly valued at $1,000. Recognizing Dick as a famous person, the guy said yes, at which point Dick took it and rode away. The owner of the necklace reported the theft, and cops spotted Dick this weekend — also while tooling around on his bicycle — and nabbed him. He was released on $25,000 bail. I'm hoping his legal team goes with the "It's Andy Dick, what did the guy expect to happen?" defense.

This is not Andy Dick's mug shot, but it might as well be.

Poor Mark Zuckerberg found 'The Social Network' 'hurtful'

In not-so-surprising news, Mark Zuckerberg didn't enjoy "The Social Network." The topic of the David Fincher-directed, Aaron Sorkin-written film about the founding of Facebook came up during a live Facebook Q&A. "It was a very interesting experience to watch a movie that was supposedly about my life," Zuckerberg says. "They went out of their way in the movie to try to get some interesting details correct, like the design of the office. But on the overarching plot, in terms of why we're building Facebook to help connect the world, or how we did it, they just kind of made up a bunch of stuff that I found kind of hurtful." Poor guy. So what hurt the most? "They kind of made up this whole plot line about how I somehow decided to create Facebook to, I think, attract girls," he says. That's totally wrong! The real reason was that he was tired of playing Farmville alone.

Looking for something to get the "Too Many Cooks" theme out of your head? (See page 26 if you don't know what we're talking about.) Jon Cozart, the talented film student behind the Disney parody "After Ever After," teamed up with fellow YouTuber Peter Hollens for "Boy Brand," a sickeningly catchy medley mocking the titans of boy banddom. The harmonies are tight, and the jokes at the expense of the bands — particularly N*SYNC and Backstreet Boys — are genuinely funny, if a little mean.

men get a pass from this kind of premeditated bashing?

Take Swift and Katherine Heigl, for example. They attract about the same amount of ire, but Swift keeps going platinum while Heigl has struggled since leaving "Grey's Anatomy" five years ago. With the massive success of Swift's "1989" last week and the premiere of Heigl's buzzy new show, "State of Affairs," next week, it's a perfect time to take a look at some of the more divisive female stars of today and see how all the toxic chatter is really affecting their bottom lines.

We broke down some of the most beloved to the most taunted celebrities to see how they stack up in the success department. Maybe you think we got something wrong, though? Like maybe Jennifer Lawrence isn't so infallible, or maybe we're all done beating up on Anne Hathaway now. Let us know in the comments at www.metro.us.

Inflatable robot movie has a 'stellar' weekend

Box office. To the shock of most, "Big Hero 6" edged past the latest Nolan flick.

The adorable fellas from "Big Hero 6" upset Christopher Nolan's "Interstellar." / DISNEY

Top 5 earners

1. 'Big Hero 6' $56.2 million
2. 'Interstellar' $50 million
3. 'Gone Girl' $6.1 million
4. 'Ouija' $6 million
5. 'St. Vincent' $5.7 million

"Big Hero 6," Walt Disney's animated superhero film featuring an inflatable, sometimes flying robot, clocked $56.2 million in U.S. and Canadian ticket sales to lead the weekend box office, topping director Christopher Nolan's space adventure, "Interstellar."

"Interstellar," starring Matthew McConaughey, opened on Wednesday and recorded $50 million over the three days from Friday through Sunday, and $52.2 million over five days.

If the final figures hold up, it would be only the fourth time in history that two new films had hit the $50 million mark on the same debut weekend, the last time being June 2013 with "Monsters University" and "World War Z," box office tracking firm Rentrak said.

"Gone Girl," director David Fincher's hit starring Ben Affleck as a husband suspected of murdering his wife, was third with $6.1 million, according to estimates from Rentrak. It has taken in more than $145 million since opening on Oct. 3.

Rounding out the top five, low-budget "Ouija," the top film for the past two weeks, made $6 million while the Bill Murray-Melissa McCarthy comedy "St. Vincent" was No. 5 with $5.7 million.

The Stephen Hawking biopic "The Theory of Everything," starring Eddie Redmayne and Felicity Jones, had the fourth-best per-screen-average of the year, grossing $207,000 from just five theaters. It expands Friday. REUTERS

Michael Caine meets Stephen Hawking

MICHAEL CAINE
GETTY IMAGES

Interview. Being in a movie about outer space meant the "Interstellar" star got to hang with another legend.

Michael Caine's work in Christopher Nolan's new film, "Interstellar," gave him the chance to become friendly with theoretical physicist Kip Thorne, who in turn introduced Caine to Hawking — who himself only had one thing on his mind: Caine's wife.

Michael Caine plays a physicist trying to save humankind in "Interstellar."
MELINDA SUE GORDON, PARAMOUNT, WARNER BROS.

When Christopher Nolan explained this project to you, how did you wrap your head around it?
Well, I was fascinated by it because I knew Kip Thorne's book about black holes and all that stuff, and then I found out that Kip Thorne was the technical adviser. And then he introduced me to Stephen Hawking, who came and saw the movie.

What was your interaction with him like?
He can hear every word you say, but he can only reply on the computer with a muscle in his eye. One muscle in the corner of his eye, it's down to that. I met him in the corridor with Kip, and Kip said, "Stephen's got a message for you. He wants to meet your wife." [Laughs] He loves the ladies. Every pretty girl that was around, I introduced him to the lot of them.

Recurring star

Nolan's regular

At what point do you just assume that you're the voice of reason in Christopher Nolan's head?
I seem to be that all the time, don't I? [Laughs] I'm always the one who's sort of there representing the people who stayed behind. Like in [the Batman films], I was the realist, saying, "You're going to do what? You're going to put on a suit and go to the top of the building?" I seem to represent the people on Earth who don't go out and actually do the things. But in some cases, as in this picture, I'm the one who thinks it up.

Maybe next time he'll let you go on the mission.
No, I'm too old now.

'TOO MANY COOKS' IS MORE THAN A VIRAL SENSATION

STREAM THIS

Matt Prigge's guide to what you can watch on the Internet.

Behold just four of the many, many, many faces in "Too Many Cooks." / PROVIDED

'Too Many Cooks'

AdultSwim.com

First aired during the 4 a.m. slot on the Cartoon Network, the Adult Swim-birthed short "Too Many Cooks" somehow became a viral sensation, despite being powerfully and brilliantly weird. It's a pastiche of the feel-good opening credits of nice '80s sitcoms like "Full House" and "My Two Dads," with actors freezing in goofy poses as their names pop up, all against a blood-curdlingly catchy theme song. (And the one here is scarily spot-on. "Too Many Cooks" may run 11 minutes, but the song will stay in your head for a lifetime.)

But it offers more than repetition-as-a-joke (though that would have been funny too). It keeps changing, turning into a work sitcom, then a cop show, then a "G.I. Joe"-style toon and so on. And then there's that pudgy, machete-wielding psychopath who soon hacks up the ever-swelling cast. What starts off snarky turns genuinely creepy before destroying itself.

Netflix Instant

'Kingpin'

You could prep yourself for the potential disappointment of "Dumb and Dumber To" by watching the original, now on Instant. Or you could revisit the Farrelly brothers' superior, loopier follow-up, which paired a one-handed Woody Harrelson with an Amish Randy Quaid.

Netflix Instant

'Batman Returns'

With "Birdman" out, now's the time for some Michael Keaton-era "Batman." But do the second one, which features a romance — between our hero and Michelle Pfeiffer's Catwoman — played out in leather and whips. Hey, kids have to learn about BDSM some time.

Into the woods with Jason Clarke

Interview. The future "Terminator: Genisys" star talks playing Abe Lincoln's tough dad in the film "The Better Angels."

In "The Better Angels," Jason Clarke plays Tom Lincoln, the rugged, remote father of the 16th president, seen enduring the death of his wife Nancy (Brit Marling) and the arrival of young Abe's stepmom, Sarah (Diane Kruger). But it's no traditional biopic. It's told in a series of montages, with a script Clarke describes as a "blueprint."

"As an actor it allows you to let go of some of the things you have as walking sticks to help you along," Clarke says. "You find a great amount of freedom and a lack of pressure, which is very refreshing. There is no right or wrong."

If the acting style was unusual for Clarke — who's now doing giant films, like this year's "Dawn of the Planet of the Apes" and the forthcoming "Terminator: Genisys," in which he'll play John Connor — the actual business of making a film in the midst of nature was not. Clarke grew up on a farm in Australia, and is an avid outdoorsman. This was still hard.

JASON CLARKE
GETTY IMAGES

"We really built the cabin out there. We wore clothes that were made from cloth that was right from the time period," he says.

Tom has been disputed over the years, some historians attacking him as a lout, others as a good man. "It was a different way of being a father at that point," Clarke explains. "The kid's got to learn how to farm, build, cook, find heat and shelter. If the father dies, which they did quite young back then, it's his job to step up and support the family." It can be shocking for modern viewers to watch their cold father-son relationship. "It's [Tom's] job to tell him to do this, that his job is to learn, he's about to be a man. He needs to know what he's doing, otherwise he might die out there."

In "The Better Angels," Jason Clarke plays Abraham Lincoln's rugged, distant father, Tom. / AMPLIFY

Working with Terrence Malick

One of the producers of "The Better Angels" is Terrence Malick, who is also a major influence on the style. (Director A.J. Edwards has worked on Malick's last three films.) Clarke even has a role in the legendary filmmaker's "Knight of Cups" — though, like most Malick actors, he's not even sure if he'll be in the final cut. "I really truly have no idea what it's going to be and how it's going to come out in the end. Terry's got a particular style, particular motives. It's a truly amazing little carnival to work in," Clarke says. "He's got a lot of method to his madness."

Easy on the sweets

Sugar is abundant during the holidays, a time when we can easily justify a calorie splurge. But it can spike your energy, followed by a moody crash. Skip desserts like cookies and pies to avoid sugar-related highs and lows — reach for a piece of fruit instead, which has fiber that keeps your metabolism steady.

Happy holiday how-to Make this the most wonderful time of the year by taking these steps to avoid depression.

Flipping the calendar to November kicks off the anticipation, joy and fun of the two-month holiday season. But those same occasions can leave some people feeling less than jolly, whether it's because of the looming winter, the prospect of uncomfortable gatherings or not feeling like there is much to celebrate. We got some tips from wellness counselor Anne Parker, of Miraval Arizona Resort & Spa, on how to avoid holiday depression.

EVA KIS
eva.kis@metro.us

Raise a toast, but keep it to just one glass. / THINKSTOCK

1 Dial back the drinking

Even though alcohol can have the effect of loosening us up, it is actually a depressant, Parker reminds us. "Alcohol consumption has a rebound effect on mood that is similar to sugar and can increase your melancholy and feelings of negativity."

2 Be careful of expectations

Expectations about how things "should be" are dangerous, particularly at holiday time when activities and events feel even more significant. "Remember to focus on the things that you can actually impact and let go of the expectations about things you can't control," Parker says.

A quick half-hour jog is an easy way to keep up with your exercise routine away from home. / GETTY IMAGES

3 Keep up your exercise routine

With gift-buying, decorating and planning trips, it can be tempting to move your usual workout routine to last place on your to-do list. However, this is the time when it is most important to make sure you are exercising regularly. "Exercise will keep your energy level up, release tension and support a positive mood," Parker advises. "Exercise is the No. 1 way to keep melancholy at bay!"

Enjoy the moment

Allow yourself to be fully present and engaged with holiday happenings. Focus on what is going on and fully enjoying what you have instead of dwelling on how you wish things could be. "If you are truly present, you give yourself the opportunity to discover, play, connect and enjoy!"

Don't skimp on sleep. / MOODBOARD

Get enough sleep

This basic self-care habit is absolutely critical to warding off depression — it is also an easy thing to cut back on when the holidays are in full gear. Make sure you're giving yourself adequate time (and a proper bed!) for nourishing sleep.

Don't fight the sadness

As the year is coming to an end, sadness and grief can become amplified. "This is normal, and you need to be gentle with yourself about this," Parker says. "Fighting the feelings or judging yourself for having these feelings just gives them more strength." Writing is a great way to acknowledge what you are feeling and move the energy in a positive way.

Start new traditions or transform old ones

If old traditions are no longer meaningful or just don't fit current circumstances, they can become a source of stress and conflict. Transform them to honor what is meaningful while creating something that fits what is important to you now.

Set priorities

Or, in other words, don't sweat the small stuff! "Focus your attention and energy on what is most meaningful and congruent with the holiday experience you want to create for yourself and others," Parker says. "Putting pressure on yourself to have all the details and minutiae perfect is a quick way to plunge yourself into frustration, anxiety and a negative mood."

Stay connected

All the obligations and endless to-do lists of the holidays can be overwhelming and lead you to lose touch with what supports you the most. "Be careful not to isolate yourself or withdraw from life — people, activities, animals, nature, God, spirit," Parker says. "That disconnect creates the opportunity for sadness, regret and disappointment to take over."

Being a 'rookie' on the job may be key to success

Career track.
A former tech executive says new employees are the key to innovation.

New to the job? Now is the time to be creative. / FUSE

The time is now

Age is just a number

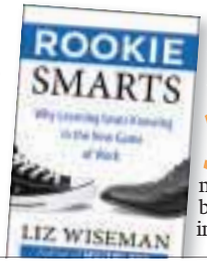
"It's never too late to be a rookie," stresses Wiseman. "Professionals who are able to use their hard-won experience but are still able to tap into their rookie smarts will build a culture of innovation."

The first few months of a new job are often filled with stress as the newcomer navigates his or her way through a sea of new faces, new rules and new challenges. But a new book argues that being the new kid on the block in a new company or field can also lead to increased creativity and some of the best moments of your career.

"When we're in this rookie mode is when we tend to do our very best work," says Liz Wiseman, the author of the book "Rookie Smarts: Why Learning Beats Knowing in the New Game of Work." "There's brilliance in it. A rookie move isn't a mistake or a disaster but is actually something that is innovative."

Here are some things real-life rookies should keep in mind as they navigate the workplace.

1 There is no honeymoon period. "Rather than be nervous, [realize] that this is where you are going to do your best work," says Wiseman. "Instead of seeing those first six months as a write off and kind of being in learning mode and not being expected to contribute, actually the first six months is when people are valuable."



2 Ask smart questions. "Start reaching out to people who know [the lay of the land]," says Wiseman. "And that humble request for help is likely to kick in somebody's mentoring genes."

3 Don't be arrogant. No one has made friends by bluntly criticizing the way things are done. "I think approaching anything by saying 'I have a better way' is not going to go over well," Wiseman notes. "I think the best approach, the humbler approach, is to think 'what can I learn from you, what can you teach me' and then just deliver fast and I think just show them."

4 Build a record of success. "If you could show a trend of [success], hiring managers will see that what you have is learning agility," she notes.

Election message anything but clear

Re: 'Obama needs to fix his policy' (Metro, Nov. 7) When letter writer George Christian says Obama's policies were on the ballot this election, he is right, but not how he thinks. After all, several (red) states passed increases in minimum wage, another state passed expanded background checks for gun purchases and Massachusetts opted to require paid sick time for workers. Most of these same states voted in Republican lawmakers who oppose (or flip-flopped on) these measures. In that light, the message of this past election is hardly clear.
CHARLES HALL, VIA EMAIL

What is the GOP angry about?

Re: 'Obama needs to fix his policy' (Metro, Nov. 7) So George Christian argues the election was a "stunning" defeat of "Obama's agenda"? What is that agenda? All I see is a guy who is trying to improve the quality of life of Americans. Stocks are up, gas is down, property values have rebounded, health care means more than it did and we are not in any major wars. What exactly is the percentage who voted Republican actually upset about?

Cuban: OKC should tank

Mavericks owner Mark Cuban is no stranger to saying controversial things. He dropped his latest on Sunday. Cuban suggested the Thunder should tank the season with stars Kevin Durant and Russell Westbrook both out an extended period of time, referring to when the Spurs finished near the bottom in 1997 when David Robinson was hurt and they won the lottery and picked Tim Duncan. "The question I don't think anybody has asked is: Why don't they pull a David Robinson and try to get Tim Duncan?" said Cuban. The Thunder has started 2-5.

Jarrett takes ball, attention in upset

NFL. The hardly known safety had a huge game, including two interceptions, as he started Sunday.

Jarrett came up with a crucial diving interception at the goal line in the first quarter. / GETTY IMAGES

Jaiquawn Jarrett couldn't remember after Sunday's 20-13 win the exact number of starts he's had with New York — even if he can count them on one hand.

But it was the unheralded Jarrett, a former second-round pick of the Eagles in 2011, who keyed a feisty Jets defense to the win.

He had seven tackles, one sack, a fumble recovery and interceptions in the first and third quarter after finding out Friday he would be making the start for rookie first-round pick Calvin Pryor.

"When the tables are rolling for you, you just got to continue to capitalize," Jarrett said. "The ball fell in our favor and we were able to get the offense the ball and they were able to go down there and get some points for us."

Pryor is still far more comfortable playing the run. In a game against a quarterback like Ben Roethlisberger, the Jets feared Pryor could get burned.

What went right

1 Containing Big Ben
It was assumed Steelers quarterback Ben Roethlisberger would have a huge game against the Jets. Instead, Roethlisberger finished with a rather poor 30-of-43 for 343 yards with two interceptions. But that includes an 80-yard garbage time touchdown. Roethlisberger came into this game with just three interceptions on the season.

2 All about turnovers
The Jets didn't have a single turnover in the game for a second straight week — a huge accomplishment for a team that was hemorrhaging the ball under Geno Smith.

3 Set the tone
The Jets came out early and dominated the ball in the first quarter. They allowed just five total yards.

And so Jarrett got his first start of the season against a quarterback who had an NFL-record 12 touchdowns the last two weeks.

"I think as a unit, as a team, we came together. We dialed in, we stayed focused on doing just our job," Jarrett said. "We were able to go out there and execute and get the job done."

New face, place

VICK FINISHED WITH HIS BEST GAME AS A JET. GETTY IMAGES

Vick solidifies his hold on starting spot

Michael Vick has proven to be everything that his previous 12 years in the league would indicate.

While his two touchdown passes, including a 67-yard connection with T.J. Graham in the first quarter, were important for spurring the Jets' win, it was equally important that he didn't turn the ball over.

"In my heart, I feel like on any team I can be the starter. As long as it is not Aaron Rodgers or Ben Roethlisberger," Vick said. "I am not saying those guys are better quarterbacks, I am just saying that I am confident in my abilities. If there is an opportunity there, yeah. But I do feel like at times, the opportunities were there but the coaches made the decisions not do it. And I solely understood everything that was taking place. It was all about developing a young quarterback, mentoring a young quarterback and giving him every opportunity to succeed." KRISTIAN DYER

New face, new place

Seahawks run over Giants on way to victory

The Giants hung tight with the defending champions long enough to make it look like they could pull off a huge upset. In the end, it was just a tease.

The Seahawks (6-3) pounded the Giants (3-6) in the second half — and fourth quarter specifically — as they sent New York to its fourth consecutive loss, 38-17.

We look at three things that went wrong as the Giants are perilously close to making the last month of the season completely meaningless for the playoff picture.

1 Beasting
The Giants simply had no answer for Marshawn Lynch, specifically in the second half. The running back known as "Beast Mode" pounded the Giants for 140 yards and four touchdowns as part of a day in which Seattle rushed for 350 yards. New York hasn't given up that many rushing yards since 1978. Buffalo's Terry Miller ran for over 200 yards in that game in a season in which the Giants finished 6-10. It looks like they're headed to a similar end-of-season record in 2014.

Russell Wilson had the Giants defense running in circles to the tune of 107 rushing yards. / GETTY IMAGES

2 Gotta have heart
The talk all week from the Giants was about effort and heart. And yet, on Sunday, it looked like only Odell Beckham Jr. — a rookie — showed much of any fight. The defense and offense both took a rain check on the second half. Even Eli Manning's late fumble was an odd non-contact dropped ball. Now we'll find out if the team really has any heart.

3 Broken record
It's become like a broken record, but the Giants can't run the ball and they can't win if they can't run the ball. Hopefully Rashad Jennings will be back next week, because Andre Williams — despite a nice touchdown Sunday — is not cutting it. Maybe getting Beckham involved in the running game, as they did once against Seattle, is an option. MARK OSBORNE
